PG & Research Department of Computer Science & Application and Internal Quality Assurance Cell (IQAC) Organises
Faculty Training Programme on MS Office on the 10th of February 2023

The PG and Research Department of Computer Science organised an insightful Faculty Training Programme on February 10, 2023, which aimed at equipping the staff with proficient skills in Microsoft Office. Mr. H. Sivalingan, Assistant Professor in the Department of Computer Science, commenced the event as the resource person for the initial session, sharing valuable insights. Following this, Dr. T. Preethi, a professional in the field led the second session, delving into advanced aspects of Microsoft Office.

The training, which unfolded as a hands-on experience, focused on empowering Providence faculty members with in-depth knowledge of Advanced Excel Tools and the broader spectrum of Microsoft Office applications. This expansive approach aimed to not only familiarise the participants with the details of these tools but also to facilitate practical application in their academic and administrative responsibilities.

The event proved instrumental in fostering the professional development of faculty members, providing them with a solid foundation and practical skills in utilising MS Office tools effectively. By bridging the gap between theoretical knowledge and practical application, the training session played a pivotal role in enhancing the overall productivity and efficiency of the faculty members, thereby contributing to the continuous growth of the academic community at Providence.
