When I was born into this world, my parents might have rejoiced the day as my birthday and shared their joys with others. But in fact I always felt that the day I had entered into the portals of Providence College was my real birthday because “the real I” was born on the solacing laps of this college and was grown into a flourishing person who I am today.

During the five years of my stay here innumerable opportunities, academic and others, were laid before me to bring out all my inborn talents and shape them well so as to make me a well known person not only here but also in the neighbouring districts as well.

Life brings tears, smiles, promises and memories. Tears dry, smiles fade, promises fail but memories last for ever. They always bloom in our hearts and spread sweet fragrance to soothe our feelings. It is impossible for me to list out all the sweet memories of the five long years which I still cherish, because if I do so the list may become infinite. I still remember with heartfelt gratitude the Management, Principal and all my professors whose guidance and encouragement led me to the illuminating heights so as to make me to be adjudged as the Best Student of the District by a youth organization in the year 2004.

Suffice it to say that if I am a scholar, a good teacher, a well known orator and debater and an author now, everyone of these is because of the ways paved for me by this college. If you have talents and have sincere interest to develop them you can be sure, this college is the true platform for it.
